How did the Fund perform in the last year?

During the period from July 2023 to June 2024, the DF Dent Midcap Growth Fund underperformed both of its benchmarks, the Russell 2500 Index and the Russell Midcap Growth Index.

The underperformance relative to the Russell 2500 Index was primarily driven by a negative sector allocation effect and to a lesser extent, a negative stock selection effect. Notably, the Information Technology sector and Materials sector positively contributed to the portfolio's performance. This was offset by performance in the Consumer Discretionary sector, Financials sector, and Health Care sector.

Energy was the top performing sector for the Russell 2500 benchmark. The Fund's lack of exposure to the Energy sector, resulted in a negative total effect on the portfolio. The sectors that detracted most from the benchmark's performance were Communication Services and Health Care. In contrast, the Fund's allocation to Communication Services positively contributed to the portfolio, unlike the Fund's exposure to the Health Care sector, a laggard in the benchmark, which adversely affected its performance, both with negative allocation and stock selection effects.

The underperformance relative to the Russell Midcap Growth Index was primarily driven by both stock selection and sector allocation. The largest detractors from performance were the Financials sector and Consumer Discretionary sector.

Utilities and Financials were the top performing sectors of the Russell Midcap Growth Index. The Fund's lack of exposure to the Utilities sector was a minor detractor, while stock selection in the Financials sector had a more significant impact on performance. Consumer Staples and Health Care sectors were the worst performing sectors for the benchmark. While the Fund had positive returns in Consumer Staples, both Consumer Staples and Health Care also detracted from the Fund's performance.
