How did the Fund perform in the last year?

During the period from February 25, 2025, through June 30, 2025, the DF Dent Small Cap Growth Fund underperformed the Russell 2000 Index and the Russell 2000 Growth Index.

The underperformance was a function of stock selection rather than sector allocation, though the drivers were more nuanced. Two notable contributors to underperformance were our exposure to companies in the life sciences industry, which performed poorly, and our relative lack of exposure to companies in several momentum-driven industries such as artificial intelligence, quantum computing, and space. The former impacted stock selection within our healthcare exposure while the latter primarily impacted stock selection in information technology but also extended materially into industrials.

The Fund's performance relative to the Russell 2000 Index was driven primarily by sector allocation. Notably, being underweight the benchmark in the Energy sector and overweight the benchmark in the Information Technology and Industrials sectors contributed to the Fund's performance, as did stock selection in the Financials and Materials sectors. Financials, Industrials, Consumer Staples, and Communication Services were the top performing sectors in the Russell 2000 Index. Stock selection in the Health Care, Consumer Staples, and Information Technology sectors detracted the most from performance. Energy, followed by Health Care were the two detractors from the benchmark's performance.

The underperformance relative to the Russell 2000 Growth Index was driven almost entirely by stock selection. Stock selection in the Consumer Discretionary, Health Care, Consumer Staples, Industrials, and Information Technology sectors were all drags versus the index. Financials, Industrials, Information Technology, and Consumer Staples were the top performing sectors in the Russell 2000 Growth Index. Allocation was a noticeable positive versus the index with overweights in Financials and Industrials and underweights in Health Care and Energy contributing the most. Energy, followed by Health Care were the two detractors from the benchmark's performance.
